THOUSANDS FLEE FLOOD IN WESTERN MISSOURI

KANSAS CITY, Mo., (UPI)-Rivers and normally trick KANSAS CETY, Mo., (UPI)—Rivers and normally trick-ling creeks flashed from their banks over hundreds of miles in western Missouri today, driving thousands from their homes, cascading into business and residential districts of a dozen small towns and blocking highway travel. Rains measured up to 13 inches at some points. The body of II-year-old Mike Henley was found in a tree after the family car was swept away by the flooding Black-water River near Holden, Mo.

You have just read the Toyota Crown option list!

The Toyota Crown is a shocking automobile. It has only one optional extra - a radio. Most of the goodies the others add on, Toyota builds in. Even standard optional features like whitewall tires and chrome wheel discs do not cost you a penny extra.

Shocking isn't it? And so is the price. Plus the generous trade allowance CMI dealers are dealing out these days. Very shocking.

And it's the same no matter which Toyota Crown you buy. The one with the bucket seats and 4 on the floor, the one with the sofa seat and the automatic or the one with the column shift and sofa seat. 12 models. 1 option - radio.

When you take a good long look at the big Toyota Crown (and a good long drive) you're in for a few more shocks. It has the craftsmanship, fit and finish of some of the finest cars built. It has a ride somewhat between a well-bred sports sedan and a limousine.

One thing for sure, you can forget most of the foreign car traits when you own a Toyota Crown. Toyota builders think along the same lines you do.

So, go ahead . . . live a little. Drive a Toyota Crown tonight.

ground for the government by his latest decision in the Rivard case. He has stated that the recaptured escapee will be made available as a witness in the Denis preliminary hearing on bribery if the Ontario prosecutor conducting the case wants him.

The minister has made the point that Canada is concerned about meeting its obligations under the extradition treaty with the United States, but "we must, of course, also consider whether there are any requirements that Rivard be kept in Canada on account of charges arising out of the Dorion inquiry."

This provides a reply to the suggestion that the government was speeding the exit of the man wanted in the United States on a narcotics charge in order to prevent him from further embarrassing the government by what he might say. The government, obviously, has no inclination to leave the impression that the extradition of Rivard has, as Mr. Diefenbaker charged, "all the appearances of a cover-up."

The authorities, furthermore, recognize the fact that Canadians wish no opportunity to be missed which might help to expose and eliminate any unsavory or illegal arrangements between political parties and criminal elements in this country.

Whether Rivard could or would give information of value is a question that events only can answer. Mr. Knowles, for the NDP, believes we should be told all he knows about the contribution of the underworld to the Liberal or any other parties." Mr. Thompson, for Social Credit, thinks that Rivard's recapture should give Canadian authorities a chance to probe the extent of international crime in this country and "further ramifications of bribery and patronage in government."

The political motivation of these gentlemen is understood, of course. At the same time, they have given voice to issues which trouble Canadians beyond party lines. Mr. Cardin recognizes that fact. Without causing unnecessary delay, he properly makes Rivard available for appearance in a Canadian court if the authorities want him for the Denis hearing.

IN releasing the latest report of the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission, Mr. Lucien Cardin, the minister of justice, gave the now standard assurance that "the usual consideration" will be given "the question of what further steps ought to be It would be sur-prising if Mr. Cardin, having barely moved into his new office and being overarising from the Dorion findings, had found time to read or appraise this latest document. Western plainly it is not a report like other re-ports and it demands of the government far more urgent consideration than is commonly accorded combines investiga-

This report concerns the operations of the east-bound and west-bound shipping conferences, which substantially control liner services between our east coast and Great Lakes ports and those of the British Isles. It is an indictment of the British Isles. It is an indictment of near-monopolies which have fixed rates for most of the century and still hold them above competitive levels. This is no matter affecting a single interest, a single city or a single region in Can-ada; it concerns the whole country.

Economic Goals Context

FROM WASHINGTON

The report is historic for another reason. For the first time, the commission has interpreted the public interest in the light of the economic goals for Canada set out in the Deutsch report. It cites the finding of the Economic Council that rate we require an average rate of growth in the volume of exports of atleast 10 per cent per year. While the commissioners in their conclusions seem somewhat timid and illogical to me, there is no doubt that they see a threat to the attainment of our goals in the present practices of the shipping com-

Vulnerable Trade

A supplementary point should be noted here. Dr. Deutsch and his col-leagues placed special emphasis upon the expansion of our trade in processed and manufactured goods. It is precisely such trade which is most vulnerable to the exactions of the shipping rings. For in the case of grain and some bulk goods, the combined competition of tramps and non-conference liners is effective enough-to make price-rigging an extremely difficult enterprise.

The two conferences attacked in the report have a long history going back to the first decade of the century. They have participated in cartels with other conferences including those concerned with shipping between Britain and U.S. eastcoast ports. Indeed, ocean freight fixing is a problem for many countries. Generally speaking, nations greatly de-pendent upon their merchant marines (such as Britain and Japan) have been disposed to treat the conferences with impressive tolerance while countries less dependent on-foreign shipping (the United States is an excellent example) have consistently sought to regulate them.

Canadian concern with the shipping rings dates from the Laurier period. There was Canadian representation on two British royal commissions (1906 and and operated its own merchant marine. This government enterprise seems to have been guided, however, in its relations with the conferences by the old precept; "If you can't lick 'em, join 'em." It joined. Two reports, one by a special select mittee of Parliament, the other by an official of trade and commerce, prompted the abortive venture. The government proposed to subsidize a British shipowner to operate an Atlantic service free of conference control. The scheme was heavily criticized and collapsed when the ship-owner died. An effort to control rates on the Great Lakes also failed when the withdrawal of American carriers disrupted the grain trade.

40 Years' Immunity

After these unhappy experiences of the Canadian government, the conferences went unchallenged for nearly 40 years. But trouble developed in February 1959 when the Helga Dan, a vessel specially equipped for winter navigation, and owned by the non-conference Lauritzen Line of Copenhagen, startled shippers by successfully pioneering a new service into the port of Quebec. Although the conferences could offer no alternative services to shippers, they used their powers deriving from exclusive patronage agreements to prevent the Helga Dan from picking up 3,000 tons of cargo vaiting export from Quebec City.

According to Dr. Cyril James, who appeared for the conferences, this was simply a regrettable error of judgement. "The important thing is that that mis-take was immediately rectified." Indeed it was. Following a complaint, an inquiry by the combines branch was instituted in that same month of February 1959.

Statistics Discounted

Although conference witnesses at-mpted to magnify the extent of competition in the 1950s from non-conference liners, their statistics were discounted by the commission. The finding was that, in the late 1950s, over 80 per cent of east-bound liner traffic and over 90 per cent west-bound was carried by conference vessels. This suggests that the competition was at best marginal. The commi sion thought in fact that in this situation the fixed rates set by the conferences would act as an umbrella for those competitors who did appear.

That rates generally have been artificially high is suggested by the many instances of substantial cuts when conlines were faced with effective

The arrogance of these conferences may be judged from another finding. It was not until 1952 that service to Great Lakes ports was provided by a confer-ence line. But the combines did not hesitate in these circumstances to impose their penalty-backed exclusive patronage arrangements on Canadian ship-

Evidence was presented that the rates charged were sometimes such as to place Canadian exporters in a disadvantageous position as compared to their foreign competitors. This is the more disturbing when considered in the context of the Economic Council's recent report.

Disparities In Sentence

By JAMES H. GRAY from Calgary

FROM time to time at the Canadian Bar Society conventions, the oratory zeroes in on the need for more uniform in our laws and their enforcement. The discussion is naturally broad and statesmanlike and is seldom eoncerned with a police magistrate's ulcers or spleen. But out here on the praihow a magistrate happens to feel seems to count for a great deal in sentencing malefactors. In Edmonton, recently, it was a teen-ager's bad luck to be hauled before a magistrate who had "a thing" about screaming tires. "I am sick and tired of hearing tires screaming," he said. Then he fined the teedager $100 for disturbing the peace be-

In the same city, a group of teen-agers was arrested for causing a dis-turbance on Edmonton's main street. They impeded traffic, molested pedes-trians and were excessively noisy and grabbed women and girls walking alone. They were fined $15 each. In Calgary, a group of youths convicted of similar boisterous behavior were fined $50 each. and assaulted a pedestrian for reasons never explained was given a suspended

Saskatchewan Leniency

As a general thing, the magistrates ent than those in Alberta or Manitoba, and persons convicted of criminal acts seem to get off lighter in the Wheat Province. In Regina, for example, a man from Alberta was sent to a correctional institution for two months on four pharmes of registers of the services of charges of possession of stolen goods. He was driving a car for which he had no licence, had shoplifted several hundred dollars worth of power tools from stores in Saskatoon, Grenfell and Indian Head. In Alberta, two Saskatchewan men convicted of possessing stolen goods got one year and two years respectively for Alberta burglars have often received stiff sentences, particularly those operating at night, who have drawn long penitentiary terms. During the past couple of weeks, two Saskatchewan ouple of weeks, two Saskatchewan burglars drew suspended sentences and one, who broke into a home the night after being released from jail, was sent back for six months. He stole $153 from a purse while the owner slept.

Within each province, however, there are great inconsistencies. In Caltary the are great inconsistencies. In Calgary the bookies are usually assessed $150 or $200 for taking bets on the races. In Edmon-ton last week a bookie who had the bad judgment to open his office two blocks from the police station, was fined $1,000. The week before, two of his competitors in the same city were allowed to settle for $250 each.

Winnipeg Surprise

Persons with records usually draw stiffer terms than those without. Yet a Winnipeg magistrate recently not only turned loose an offender with a long record, he volunteered to help him financially while getting him settled into a Minor sex offences usually draw iail terms while major offences lead to the penitentiaries. Thus in Saskatchewan a number of youths convicted of criminal assault drew prison terms of up to three years. But in Edmonton, a man con-victed of abducting and indecently assaulting a seven-year-old girl was given a two-year suspended sentence.

In the Edmonton case, the magistrate a reflect the baffleme and more to reveal. The accused was described by a psychiatrist as a sex deviate of a type which almost always repeates the offence, though rarely while under suspended sentence, or while undergoing treatment.

In passing sentence the judge ordered the prisoner to report to probation officers twice a month and to take or systematic amount and to take psychiatric treatment.

"I have some misgivings about the end result," he said, "but I have greater misgivings as to what might happen to him if jailed."

These "misgivings about the end result" creep into obiter dicta of judges and magistrates passing sentences more often than they used to. The doubt that long sentences in prison act as a deterrent to crime seems to be growing on the bench as elsewhere. And a good deal seems to depend, obviously, on how the magistrate happens to be reacting to the human race on any given day.

150,000 men. Because of the great improvements in the combat-readiness of the U.S. armed services since Secretary of Defence Robert McNamara took over this country is now able to assign 150,000 men to fighting duty in Viet Nam or elsewhere without a reserve call-up. But in the first place, a considerable force is still stationed in the Dominican Republic with no early end in sight there. And in the second place, prudence requires calling some more men to the colours if all those available for com-

Invasion Force From North

It has to be remembered that the North Vietnamese Communists have already sent at least one division of their regular army, the 325th, into South Viet Nam. This invasion of the South, no less flagrant because it is covert, can always be enlarged. Reports from the front in South Viet Nam indeed speak of another northern division, the 304th, positioned to cross the border and a third, the 308th, beginning to move up.

These are the reasons why it is a good bet that the American troop level in South Viet Nam will be increased to about 150,000 men and why a call-up is being discussed. If these steps are taken, when Secretary McNamara and Ambas-sador Henry Cabot Lodge get back from Saigon, the mere increase in troop level will further imply a sharp and painful change in the established operational pattern in South Viet Nam.

A long time has passed since the Marines landed at Da Nang; but in that ole period - the fact has to be faced the American units in South Viet Nam have hardly engaged in combat above the level of brisk skirmishing. Except for the patrols in Zone D and one or two other operations, the U.S. outfits have been held in reserve and 10 per cent. The reduction is worse than it looks, too, because the crack outfits of Marines and paratroopers have tended to suffer far more heavily than any others because they are used as reserves in emergencies.

No Passive Role

In these circumstances, no policy maker in his senses could possibly contemplate sending even more U.S. troops to South Viet Nam to play a passive or quasi-passive role. The contrast between the effort required of the U.S. and Vietnamese outfits would then be too and too psychologically

It is clear, therefore, that the moment approaching when the U.S. outlits in buth Viet Nam will be actively and continuously engaged with the enemy. It will be a hard, harsh business. There will be setbacks. There will be losses in numbers sadly different from the very low numbers now taken for granted. But the alternative, pretty obviously, is to risk or to accept defeat.

Precisely because this will be a hard, harsh business, in turn it is also abundantly clear that the air attacks on North Viet Nam will be pressed home with much more vigor and decision. This is already happening, in truth.

Tactics Altered

The old system of trying to strangle the enemy by biting him in the toe began to be imperceptibly but importantly changed some weeks ago. The recent bombing of an oil depot not far from Hanoi, and the even more recent attack on the hitherto untouched railroad leading in from China, point the way toward a systematic attempt to take out serious military target systems which is still very different from indis-criminate population bombing.

It is grim to have to offer such pre-ctions; for the risks, the casualties and the sacrifices must all increase, and perhaps increase very greatly, if the predictions are correct. But there is no such thing, alas, as a cheap, riskless, painless war. Unhappily the war in Viet Nam is just like any other war; and it will not be won by empty "message sending," such as we have so vainly and so often attempted. That seems to be the fact

The Ground War Nobody Wants

exorably, events in South Viet Nam appear to be pulling the United States into the kind of Asian ground war that many U.S. military men have felt could be tought only at great disadvantage.

This is happening because the South Vietnamese army has been unable to stop the growing power of the Communists who, some sources say, now exercise varying degrees of control over about 80 per cent of the country.

The use of U.S. air power in Viet Nam has not been enough, and now U.S. au-thorities are facing the unpleasant prospect that U.S. ground troops in greater numbers may have to be thrown into the breach.

The Kremlin's Front-Runner Comes a Cropper

By LEON DENNEN

In Russia's unceasing struggle for power Aleksander Shelepin has long been regarded by Kremlinologists as a front runner for the job once held by Stalin and Nikita Khrushchev. At 47, he is the youngest of the faceless men who now rule Russia. He is also the most ambitious. However, as boss of Moscow's vast espionage network, GRU (Glavnoye Rzvedyvatelnoye Upravlenie), Shelepin lately has had a spell of bad luck that may send him into oblivion and not to the Kremlin's top.

Scores of his spies were recently caught and jailed or expelled from the United States, Britain, France, Switzerland, Norway, West Germany and from a number of countries in Latin America, Asia and Africa.

Top Red bureaucrats are known to have been shot or exiled to Siberia for lesser "acts of negligence." But Shelepin seems to assume he can violate with impunity the rules of the espionage game. Everyone knows that once a spy is exposed his usefulness is at an end. You give him a pension and pack him off to grow roses.

But Shelepin merely changes his agents' names and sends them again as "diplomats" to spy in some other country. Khairoullam Shalkarov, one of Moscow's top secret agents, has achieved the remarkable feat of being caught in three Southeast Asian countries.

Shalkarov last served as a secretary of the Russian Embassy in Colombo, Ceylon. The Ceylonese government recently said that he was a Soviet intelligence agent who once operated as a Soviet military adviser in Laos under the alias "Colonel Khakunov." Ceylon sent Shalkarov back to nterfered on behalf of the Reds in Ceylon's recent elections If this information is true, Shalkarov (or whatever his rea name) is an ineffective as well as an unskillful agent. Cey lon's elections finally brought about the fall of the entrenched pro-Red regime and its replacement by the pro-American national government of Premier Dudley Senanyake.

In 1958, Shalkarov was masquerading as a diplomat in Thailand and was expelled for "activities most dangerous to security and peace.'

Why he chose his Thailand cover-name of Shalkarov a ond time in Ceylon will probably never be known in the But it does argue a considerable lack of finesse on the part of Shelepin and his department in the GRU which is concerned with the provision of cover stories for Red spies.

To be sure, Shalkarov can claim that he is not the only Red agent to be expelled from Ceylon. As soon as Premier Senanyake came to power he deported two Red Chinese "diplomats," nine North Koreans, two North Vietnamese and 10 East German Communists.

However, Shalkarov's third consecutive failure is a more serious affair for Shelepin because of the damage done Russia's prestige in an Asian and former colonial country.

Compared to this performance by the GRU, the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency looks like a model of efficiency. (Newspaper Enterprises Assn.)

Apart from the fact that it lacked vertical lines and crosses here and there, the picture looked remarkably like Mars photographed

When I look at the first pictures from Mariner 4 I am unable to bring to my stuy the knowledge requisite to understanding. I've heard about the canals on Mars but they were not in the range of the lens directed that way. From reading the lines under the picture, I was beginning to get an inkling of the shadings that might have been caused by moisture on the planet — until one of the experts in the news story suggested the shading came from mist on the camera.

I don't know enough about what's in there, or what it's supposed to do to offer argument on anything but price.

A little wistfully I look at the Marine 4 pictures and wish that I had the ability and training to interpret them. Sadly I admit that my mind doesn't even take in the costs of the project, let alone the physical mysteries which are known only to the scientific priest-newspaper has spoken of the Holy See's financial holdings and operations, saying that the church's wealth comes from the humble and generous offerings of the people and its riches are returned to the people, as the history of yes-terday, today, and forever testifies."

ROME-For the second time

L'Osservatore Romano has rarely in the past felt itself obliged to discuss Vatican finances-and what it is prepared to say now sheds no light on the extent of the Vatican's wealth. But a current press campaign, engineered by the radical weekly L'Espresso has apperntly trodden on some tender toes.

Mild Tone

A remarkable aspect of the Vatican paper's new lengthy essay on the church's wealth is the mildness of its tone, its lack of diatribe.

L'Espresso has written that the Italian government is trying to convince the Vatican that it must pay the 30 percent tax on its dividends from Italian shares, It paid this. tax only during the first nine months of 1963 or until its protest led a Christian Demo-crat finance minister to rule that the Vatiean was immune from all Italian taxes. The magazine quotes Cardinal Cicognani, the secretary of state, as saying that rather than pay the tax "we will sell all our securities, unloading nearly a thousand billion shares on the market.

While explaining that "eco-nomic wealth today also means stocks and bonds" and dmitting that between Holy See and the Italian gov-ernment "differences exist concerning the tax on dividends," the magazine judges the story of the cardinal's alleged threat as "typical of the lack of comprehension and belonging to the same unreal can finances.

The truth about the Vatican's wealth may never be known. The only firm facts are that it received 39 million dollars in eash and 52 million dollars in securities from the fascist government as part of the 1929 Lateran pacts. The administraton of the Vatican's wealth today is super-vised by Cardinal Di Jorio, who is 81, and a small group of advisers who work in a well-guarded suite of rooms near the Papal apartment.

HOWARD HURTING

Bomber Hits Large Slump On One Wing

By MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI)-It's a little pathetic watching a mighty bomber trying to operate on only one wing and a prayer, but big Frank Howard has a goat it most every day, even though it's common knowledge in every American League dugout that he can't throw a ball as far as your 15-year-old sister.

· FRANK HOWARD

Mikkelsen certainly didn't.

The trouble is all in Howard's right elbow, which frequently swells to such alarming proportions that he's un to swing a bat, brush his hair or even straighten out his arm.

"I honestly think I'll need an operation after the season is over," confessed the sixfoot-seven, 250-pound Washing-ton outfielder, "This isn't ton outfielder. "This isn't something that developed over-night. I've had this now for more than two years.

The elbow swelled up so much on Howard a few weeks before the All-Star game that his batting average nosedived 30 points in three weeks. The pain became so intense that he finally had to go to manager Gil Hodges and ask to

"If he did a thing like that, you know he has to be hurting," declared Hodges, "They don't make his kind of workers any more. He's the type who'll go out there and keep playing until he drops, and you'll never hear a peep out of him."

Howard's arm pained him considerably before Sunday's game with the Yankees but he refused to beg off. All he did in a 3-0 Washington victory was blast a 450-foot homer into the upper left-field deck at Yankee Stadium, where few baseballs ever were hit before. It was his 15th homer of the year and he didn't even hit the ball flush. "It was a palm ball or some kind of off-speed pitch," How-ard half-apologized. Pete Mikkelsen, the Yankee starter, served up the delivery in the sixth inning. "He got the ball a little too far up on me," explained the Senators' huge left-fielder: "I don't think he meant to get the ball up that high."

Brinkman Makes Life Little Easier

Later, Hodges revealed he almost didn't play Howard. "I know he's been suffering," said the Washington manager. "You kind of watch him before the game and you can tell by his actions. There's no question the elbow was bothering him."

Since the Senators have had to live with Howard's ailment ever since the first day he put on one of their uniforms this past spring after being acquired from the Dodgers last Novem-ber, they rigged up a way to help him.

past spring after being acquired from the Dodgers last November, they rigged up a way to help him as best they could. Shortstop Eddie Brinkman was instructed to hustle out toward left field so as to shorten the distance Howard has to throw the ball any time it is hit to him with a rival runner on Brinkman, owner of an extraordinarily strong arm, has never failed in his extra-curricula duty and the arrangement has worked out fairly well.

"Eddie has such a good arm that no one's going to run on him once he gets the ball from Frank," explained Hodges. "It would be different if Howard were in right field. But that's the reason I play him in left.

'Oh, sure, there'll be a slipup once in a while, but not too often. When Frank's arm really is bothering him, he'll try to hit Brinkman (with a short relay throw) and the ball will go over Eddie's head."

A Blend of Ribbing and Respect..

That gives you some idea of how much trouble Howard's elbow actually gives him.

"I've taken cortisone shots and they help somewhat," said Howard. "But I get violent reactions to them. My arm blows

"I'm not going to cry about it, though. This is something I've been living with for the last two and a half years so I'm kind of used to it by now.

"They took X-rays and told me there were no bone chips, so the trouble has to be muscular. Personally, I think an operation might be the best thing that ever happened to me."

Meanwhile, Howard goes out there day after day and gives it the best he has. He takes a lot of ribbing about his arm from his teammates, but privately they'll tell you the big guy isn't the least bit short on courage

ICE SKATING TO ICE MAKING

Rink Rat Now Big Cheese

The 50 miles of pipes in Memorial Arena are in the hands of a good man - a plumber who has skated his way half around the world. John Bate, 29, is assistant manager of the arena, a job he took June 14 as administrator responsible to civic recreation manager Jack Morgan. Vancouver-born and raised. he literally grew up on skates at the Forum, played hockey, was a rink rat, travelled 31/2 years with Ice Capades, somehow managed to apprentice as a plumber and joined the Pa-cific National Exhibition main tenance staff as a journeyman. For two years he was director of the PNE Agrodome building before coming to Victoria. Bate is a man who knows arenas from inside—deep in-side where the freezing brine gurgles into the miles of arti-ficial ice coils that never meet the eyes of patrons.

How then, did he get a job as a member of the skating chorus in one of the continent's biggest ice revues? "On a dare," he explains. "I was a rink rat at the Forum in the days before the Zamboni (the motorized monster that cleans and resurfaces ice between periods in hockey games).

'I was playing hockey that winter (1956) when I decided to take up figure skating in the Ice Capades audition.

"We were just standing around there with all these beautiful girls and they said, 'Dare you to audition.'

Well, I went out there and skated, and it looked like I was trying to tie my shoelaces.

in local skating club shows. During the 1960-61 season with Ice Capades, Bate was on the tour that played nine weeks in Moscow. He said the show expected to divide its time between Moscow and Leningrad, but the Russians felt otherwise. The troupe had a wonderful trip anyway and managed to see Leningrad for a day by chartering a plane. "In Russia they take Mon-day off as we take Sunday,"

As assistant manager, Bate will advise on bookings for the arena.

Bate said.

"I would like to see more European and international groups come in," he said.

Satellite TV has been an eye-opener to what Europeans have to offer—such acts as the Moscow Circus, Red Army Chorus and the Moiseyev Dancers.

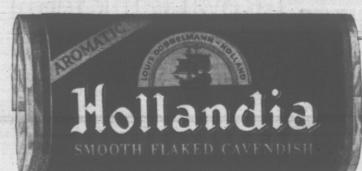

"If you can bring in something different, I think the people will go for it," Bate

Part of his chorus work in Ice Capades resulted last year in a duo starring himself and the former Marilyn Bruan, a Victoria dental assistant who turned skating pro to make three seasons with the Ice Capettes. They were married here July 11, 1964.

Ale is not another name for beer.

(Ours is the one on the right.)

Doesn't look much different from beer, does it? So why does Ale taste so different? One reason is malt. All malt and plenty of it gives our Ale weight. Authority. Some days you'll prefer a lighter brew. Beer, for example. Fine. We brew that, too. But when you do thirst for a change, will you consider Ale? Because it is a change.

On a breezy day a few coho seasons ago, I announced to my wife that for once I wasn't going to come back from a fishing trip with wet feet. Then I set off to join a friend who stabled a cruiser at Canoe Cove. The third member of our party our party was an Eng-lish Canadian who, as the day proceed ed, displayed a merry turn of wit and a tru ly encycloped-ic knowledge ing. His name was Anthony

In a windy alley off James Island, our engine got some seaweed in its whunkus, and expired amid waves of con-siderable magnitude. While the cruiser rolled, corkscrewand attempted to stand on its head, the owner and I clamped a three-horse out-board on the stern bracket. In the course of this operation, I got my feet wet.

Tony Bristowe, unruffled. cheered us with philosophical comment, and a dissertation on the pleasures of fresh water angling.

The skipper then set to on his baulky main engine, and I crouched on the bracket by the outboard, with orders to keep between it and the fol-lowing seas. That got the rest

While we plodded north thus, Mr. Bristowe served us nicely balanced drinks from the galley, and dwelt on the pleasures of dry fly fishing in the

"You know," I said to him ather vindictively when we made port after several drenched hours, "you should put some of that stuff in a book!"

What brings that wet cruise to mind is a book, nicely printed and handily indexed, which landed on my desk a couple of days past. Its title is "Freshwater Fishing. Your Questions Answered." The au-thor is Anthony Bristowe of Victoria, and into 279 pages he has packed a wealth of information about stream and lake angling in all its forms.

Some of the material it consome of the material it con-tains was offered in a Univer-sity of Victoria extension course on "The Art and Sci-ence of Fly Fishing" which Tony Bristowe conducted last

All of it comes from experience, and there are few coun-tries in which roving angler Bristowe has failed to wet a line. The gear of the sport is dealt with. So is its history.

Want to learn how to tle a fine trout fly? Complete in-structions are set down, with sketches to help.

Concerned with the fighting qualities of the sunfish? Mr. Bristowe, with no trace of condescension, deals with this small boys' quarry in a good round paragraph.

When and where did the game of luring fish with natural or artificial food on a hook have its beginning? Hard to establish; but we learn that the ancient Egyptians included cod-and-line angling among their sports.

Closer to home in time and distance, Mr. Bristowe plunges heartily into an exposition of winter steelhead fishing so thorough that I recommend it as a guide to any reader interested in this rugged and frequently frost

Of special note are the observations on taking winterrun steelhead with the fly . . an achievement believed impossible until such experts as Tony Bristowe and Roderick Haig - Brown demonstrated that it could be brought off.

MINOR MIRACLE IN COMMUNICATION AT SHAWNIGAN

They Get the Message in Five Languages

A miracle of a minor sort has happened at Shawnigan Lake where 32 children and a dog are taking a lesson in internation-

The dog, a mongrel breed who came from nowhere in particular and is of dubious racial origin, is also attending daily. The minor miracle is that all of them-the children, the dog, the instructors and the counsellors-understand each other perfectly although as many as five languages are spoken. The dog understands that the instructors don't particularly want him around so he makes himself scarce when they appear,

But if one of the laughing children calls he comes running and

The children take their meals in a cafeteria, buffet style.

"There is still a lot of pointing and grabbing, but the children usually get what they want," said village director John Berges.

"They also sleep in small groups in different rooms and we were a bit surprised to see them mixing so well in choosing a roommate on the first day they arrived.

The mixing extends even to the languages and it is a bit surprising to see a Japanese and Norwegian boy apparently conversing intelligently and under-standing each other using their

There is still a lot of "monkey see," monkey do" learning but the children usually interpret these actions in terms of their own language while doing whatever they are told.

A highlight Sunday was a per-formance in Indian dancing by the Cowichan Indians.

Monday was Canada Day at the village and so after the Maple Leaf was hoisted and a "lumberjack's" breakfast dis-patched, the 32 ambassadors went outside and indulged in that great Canadian pastime

Other activities included totem pole making and later on danc-ing. In the meantime the children were learning a Filipino

There is no hint of homesick. Home Winner ness in this happy little group. One of the reasons may be that the children are kept busy from dawn to dusk and there isn't time to indulge in self-pity.

The yillage director says he can remember only two children, who have ever been homesick in his eight years' experience in intrinational summer village.

The first "parliament" was to be held-today in which the children are able to voice any complaints or suggest ways to improve the camp.

Abstain From Stains With This New Idea

By PENNY SAVER

My across-the-back-fence neighbor and I were having a chat, yesterday, and she was telling me about her trip to Vancouver. She, her husband and her children were visiting the mainland city last weekend, staying with relatives, and she and her husband had gone dancing at a popular nightelub on the Sauurday evening. For this occasion (they were celebrating their anniversary at the same time) she had bought a new dress.

"Naturally," she said, "I was a little nervous, being in a strange place, and terribly excited. When I went home that night, I found that perspiration stains, combined with the decorant I was using, had rulned the outfit, staining it beyond bleaning."

I didn't blame her for being annoyed and so to prevent such a catastrophe from occurring again, I told her about a new type of decorant I've found.

This product will keep you dry because it starts that way. It is in powder form which sprays on — one press of the plunger and you have enough to keep you safe all day—and night, if you wish.

Newly formulated by a well-known cosmetic company, this dry deodorant, selling at $1.50 and $2.25 depending on size, has a pleasant light fragrance and never becomes sticky to cling to clothes or to make you uncomfortable. The drying ingredient disappears into the skin to work below the surface where bacteria, causing odor, really start to work.

dull and lifeless and also it can bleach hair and cause you to have that striped effect in your colffure. Now, a famed manufacturing company which produces beauty aids has developed a new method of shampooing color into your hair—permanently. No mess with this — just a one-step operation which gives you natural color that doesn't make your hair stift, brittle or hard to manage — just alive with color. Price is $2.25.

A little mirred, we made the return trip to the lodge next morning and have been grateful ever since that we did.

There, in broad daylight, our hosts were mortified to find that the "three Eskimos" of the night before were nothing more terrifying than a sun-blackened women's editor, her husband, George, and daughter, Nan.

From then on, Al and Joan Drummond did their best to erase the evening's mistake. Not that this was difficult, there

Actors To Be 'At Home' to Victorians

During the next few weeks, Victorians may receive an invitation to a new kind of party to be given by the actors' com-mittee of the Bastion Theatre.

The affairs will take the form of "at homes" to which hostesses in as many different districts as possible, will invite 30 or 40 of their friends and neighbors to meet Bastion Theatre actors and actresses.

The purpose of this venture is to encourage Victorians to become season ticket holders for the 1965-66 season which comnces in September at the Mc-Pherson Playhouse.

The parties are being planned in several different ways. A hostess may invite friends to her own home, be willing to organize a party at a friend's home, or offer the use of her home with the details to be taken care of by the committee.

Further information can be obtained by contacting Mrs. W. Chaster, 77 Moss Street at Or were you taking pity on your opponents? "It looked like a free finesse," replied South, "and I didn't see that the play could cost me a trick. Anyway, it might have worked." South had played the jack of clubs from dummy just about as soon as dummy had appeared on the table. East's queen had forced South's king. South had led his singleton diamond at trick two. East had won with the king illarity between NBC-TV's "Wild Kingdom" and CBS-TV's "Zoorama" is the conservation theme. Otherwise they are as alike as day and night.

Of course, they aim at different audiences. Wild Kingdom, with suave host Marlin Perkins and assistant Jim Fowles, direct their winding teach-ings to the adult viewer. Zoorama is learned in the lore of the wild animals and they speak with authority while teaching us of the animals' habits. Zoorama's host Bob Dale is a lay-

strictly a kid show man whose role has been described as "the guy from the sticks who knows nothing and asks the curator to explain everything."

Believe me, he carries out his role of rube to perfection. The one disconcerting thing is that he often speaks over the explanations of the curator of the San Diego Zoo so that there are areas of in-Zoorama is not a new program. It's only new to a national audience. It's been in existence on a local San Diego basis for the past 10 years.

It's produced by KFMB-TV, San Diego, which realizes it has a long running show on its hands, for there are some 1,350 species, 4,500 animals, at the zoo and only three animals are handled at one time on one show. It's produced in three separate, seven-minute seg-nts, on single animal studies.

Each of the segments is instructive in nature and conservation stressed to the breaking point, if there is such a point. Zoorama also tries to get the animals in different camera studies. This is usually not hard since the animals are captive in enclosed areas which allow cameras

Wild Kingdom cameras, on the other hand, go into the field to follow Perkins and Fowler in their dealings

Wild Kingdom luckily will return to NBC-TV in the It will also be carried on the CBC-TV network (Channels 2 and 6).

Zoorama is how seen on Channels 7 and 12 as a Sunday CBS-TV feature.

It's wholly worth while and good television for children if only to entertain through the antics of the animals. But rest assured, learning will follow through the entertainment, and help youngsters appreciate the role of nature a bit more Torn Billington, manager of Simpsons-Sears, the store sponsoring the exhibition, said this morning that all art displayed will be for sale during the five-day display.

"It gives the average man a chance to look at art collected by a world-known collector and to buy in the knowledge that he is purchasing the best," he said. Throughout the exhibition actor Price will be on hand to discuss the merits of the paintings and other art works with those visiting the exhibition. The Vincent Price collection is well known in Eastern Canada and the United States and has been termed one of the finest art exhibitions in existence.

"The selection being braucht."

"The selection being brought Victoria will be a mixture of the finest traditional and modernistic paintings done by artists in the United States and Canada, but the emphasis will be on Canadian artists," Mr. Billington said.

During his week-long stay here Mr. Price will be accom-panied by his wife.

THOUSANDS FLEE FLOOD IN WESTERN MISSOURI

KANSAS CITY, Mo., (UPI)-Rivers and normally trick-KANSAS CITY, Mo., (UPI)—Rivers and normally trick-ling creeks flashed from their banks over hundreds of miles in western Missouri today, driving thousands from their homes, cascading into business and residential districts of a dozen small towns and blocking highway travel. Rains measured up to 13 inches at some points. The body of II-year-old Mike Henley was found in a tree after the family car was swept away by the flooding Black-water River near Holden, Mo.

MORTGAGE PLAN

Arthur Mayse

On a breezy day a few coho seasons ago, I announced to my wife that for once I wasn't going to come back from a fishing trip with wet feet. Then I set off to join a friend who stabled a cruiser at Canoe Cove.

who, as the day proceed-ed, displayed a merry turn of wit and a truly encycloped-ic knowledge of sport fish ing. His name was Anthony

In a windy alley off James Island, our engine got some seawegd in its whunkus, and expired amid waves of considerable magnitude. While the cruiser rolled, corkscrew ed, and attempted to stand on its head, the owner and I clamped a three-horse oul-board on the stern bracket. In the course of this operation, I got my feet wet.

Tony Bristowe, unruffled, cheered us with philosophical comment, and a dissertation on the pleasures of fresh water angling.

The skipper then set to on his baulky main engine, and I crouched on the bracket by the outboard, with orders to keep between it and the following seas. That got the rest of me wet.

Mr. Bristowe served us nicely balanced drinks from the galley, and dwelt on the pleasures of dry fly fishing in the

What brings that wet cruise to mind is a book, nicely printed and handily indexed, which landed on my desk a couple of days past. Its title is "Freshwater Fishing. Your Questions Answered." The author is Anthony Bristowe of Victoria and force. Victoria, and into 279 pages he has packed a wealth of information about stream and lake angling in all its forms.

Some of the material it con-tains was offered in a University of Victoria extension course on "The Art and Sci-ence of Fly Fishing" which Tony Bristowe conducted last winter.

All of it comes from experience, and there are few coun-tries in which roving angler Bristowe has failed to wet a line. The gear of the sport is deaft with. So is its history.

Want to learn how to tie a fine trout fly? Complete in-structions are set down, with sketches to help. Concerned with the fighting qualities of the sunfish? Mr. Bristowe, with no trace of condescension, deals with this small boys' quarry in a good round paragraph. and where did the game of luring fish with natural or artificial food on a hook have its beginning? Hard to establish; but we learn that the ancient Egyptians included rod-and-line angling among their sports.

Closer to home in time and distance, Mr. Bristowe plunges heartily into an exposition of winter steelh fishing so thorough that I recommend it as a guide to any reader interested in this rugged and frequently frost coated pursuit.

Of special note are the observations on taking winter-run steelhead with the fly . . . an achievement believed impossible until such experts as Tony Bristowe and Roderick Haig - Brown demonstrated that it could be brought off.

To one question which has vexed practitioners of Wal-ton's art for generations, Mr. Bristowe comes up with a solid

MINOR MIRACLE IN COMMUNICATION AT SHAWNIGAN

They Get the Message in Five Languages

A miracle of a minor sort has happened at Shawnigan Lake where 32 children and a dog are taking a lesson in internation-

The youngsters, from eight countries, are attending the Children's International Summer Village at Strathcona Lodge School

The dog, a mongrel breed who came from nowhere in pardicular and is of dubious racial origin, is also attending daily.

The minor miracle is that all of them-the children, the dog, ne instructors and the counsellors-understand each other perfeetly although as many as five languages are spoken.

The dog understands that the instructors don't particularly want him around so he makes himself scarce when they appear

But if one of the laughing children calls he comes running and petted, cajoled or scolded in their native language.

There is an understanding which runs throughout the entire village which is either a tribute to internationalism or a tribute to the 11-year-olds who are making it work at Shawnigan Lake

in a cafeteria, buffet style. "There is still a lot of point-ing and grabbing, but the children usually get what they want," said village director

John Berges.
"They also sleep in small groups in different rooms and we were a bit surprised to see them mixing so well in choosing a roommate on the first day

The mixing extends even to the languages and it is a bit surprising to see a Japanese and Norwegian boy apparently conversing intelligently and understanding each other using their native languages.

There is still a lot of "monkey see, monkey do" learning but the children usually interpret these actions in terms of their own language while doing what-ever they are told.

A highlight Sunday was a per-formance in Indian dancing by the Cowichan Indians.

Monday was Canada Day at the village and so after the Maple Leaf was hoisted and a "lumberjack's" breakfast dispatched, the 32 ambassadors went outside and indulged in that great Canadian pastime

Other activities included totem pole making and later on danc-ing. In the meantime the children were learning a Filipino

There is no hint of homesickess in this happy little group. One of the reasons may be that the children are kept busy from dawn to dusk and there isn't time to indulge in self-pity. The village director says he can remember only two children

Arthur Mayse

On a breezy day a few coho seasons ago, I an-nounced to my wife that to come back from a fishing trip with wet feet. Then I set off to join a friend who stabled a cruiser at Canoe Cove.

our party was an Eng-lish Canadian who, as the day proceed-ed, displayed a merry turn of wit and a truly encycloped-ic knowledge of sport fishing His name was Anthony

In a windy alley off James Island, our engine got some seaweed in its whunkus, and expired amid waves of con-siderable magnitude. While siderable magnitude. the cruiser rolled, corkscrew-ed, and attempted to stand on its head, the owner and I clamped a three-horse out-board on the stern bracket. In the course of this operation, I got my feet wet.

Tony Bristowe, unruffled, cheered us with philosophical comment, and a dissertation the pleasures of fresh water angling.

The skipper then set to on his baulky main engine, and I crouched on the bracket by the outboard, with orders to keep between it and the fol-lowing seas. That got the rest of me wet.

While we plodded north thus. Mr. Bristowe served us nicely balanced drinks from the galley, and dwelt on the pleas-ures of dry fly fishing in the

"You know," I said to him rather yindictively when we made port after several drenched hours, "you should put some of that stuff in a

What brings that wet cruise to mind is a book, nicely printed and handily indexed, printed and handily indexed, which landed on my desk a couple of days past. Its title is "Freshwater Fishing, Your Questions Answered." The author is Anthony Bristowe of Victoria, and into 279 pages he has packed a wealth of infor-mation about stream and lake angling in all its forms.

Some of the material it contains was offered in a Univer-sity of Victoria extension course on "The Art and Science of Fly Fishing" which Tony Bristowe conducted last

All of it comes from experince, and there are few countries in which roving angler Bristowe has failed to wet a line. The gear of the sport is dealt with. So is its history.

Want to learn how to tie a fine trout fly? Complete instructions are set down, with sketches to help.

Concerned with the fighting qualities of the sunfish? Mr. Bristowe, with no trace of condescension, deals with this small boys' quarry in a good round paragraph.
When and where did the

Closer to home in time and distance. Mr. Bristowe plunges heartily into an ex-position of winter steelhead fishing so thorough that I recommend it as a guide to any reader interested in this rugged and frequently frost coated pursuit

Of special note are the obrun steelhead with the fly . . . an achievement believed impossible until such experts as Tony Bristowe and Roderick Haig - Brown demonstrated that it could be brought off.

To one question which has vexed practitioners of Walton's art for generations, Mr. Bristowe comes up with a solid affirmative.

Fish, he asserts, can dis-inguish colors, although they don't necessarily see them as humans do.

In this connection, the writer turns for a moment from an-swering questions to ask one. Since red is missing from the finny spectrum, why are red or partly red lures so often successful?

If you know someone who would sooner fish than eat-a description which we learn applies to one person out of every five in North America this book would make a dandy gift. Taplinger Publishing Company of New York brought it out, and the price is $5.95.

That's a lot: but where's the book that doesn't cost, these

They Get the Message in Five Languages

A miracle of a minor sort has happened at Shawnigan Lake where 32 children and a dog are taking a lesson in internation-

The youngsters, from eight countries, are attending the Children's International Summer Village at Strathcona Lodge School

The dog, a mongrel breed who came from nowhere in particular and is of dubious racial origin, is also attending daily. The minor miracle is that all of them-the children, the dog, the instructors and the counsellors-understand each other perfectly although as many as five languages are spoken. The dog understands that the instructors don't particularly want him around so he makes himself scarce when they appear.

But if one of the laughing children calls he comes running and s petted, cajoled or scolded in their native language.

There is an understanding which runs throughout the entire village which is either a tribute to internationalism or a tribute to the 11-year-olds who are making it work at Shawnigan Lake

The children take their meals

in a cafeteria, buffet style, "There is still a lot of pointing and grabbing, but the chil-dren usually get what they want," said village director

John Berges.
"They also sleep in small groups in different rooms and we were a bit surprised to see them mixing so well in choosing a roommate on the first day they arrived.

The mixing extends even to the languages and it is a bit surprising to see a Japanese and orwegian boy apparently conversing intelligently and understanding each other using their native languages.

There is still a lot of "monkey see, monkey do" learning but the children usually interpret these actions in terms of their own language while doing whatever they are told.

A highlight Sunday was a performance in Indian dancing by the Cowichan Indians.

Monday was Canada Day at the village and so after the Maple Leaf was hoisted and a "lumberjack's" breakfast dis-patched, the 32 ambassadors went outside and indulged in that great Canadian pastime

Other activities included totem pole making and later on dancing. In the meantime the chilwere learning a Filipino

There is no hint of homesickness in this happy little group. One of the reasons may be that the children are kept busy The village director says he can remember only two children who have ever been homesick in his eight years' experience in international summer village.
